

Emerging Issues & Innovation Committee

Ideal candidates for this committee are seasoned management accounting professionals who bring deep subject matter expertise in one or more areas relevant to IMA's educational and publication portfolio — such as financial planning and analysis, cost management, internal controls, sustainability reporting, data analytics, or emerging technologies in finance.

Volunteers should have a strong working knowledge of IMA's Statements of Management Accounting (SMAs) and an appreciation for the rigor and standards they represent, as committee members will play an active role in vetting thought leadership reports and ensuring all content aligns with established professional guidance.

Beyond technical expertise, the ideal volunteer is intellectually curious, collegial, and committed to advancing the profession — someone who can engage constructively with diverse perspectives, provide thoughtful feedback on complex topics, and contribute meaningfully to content that shapes how management accountants learn and practice.

Must be able to commit to quarterly meetings and availability to review materials asynchronously for 1-4 hours/month.
